

Storyline

This story dates back to the 1880's. In a town named North Fan, there was an attack by the the army of another neighbouring town in order to gain control over North fan. The whole town got converted into a war zone where everyone had to get quarantined. Whosoever got out used to get killed. People started living in their own houses. Soon food sources began drying up. In a 10-story building, there were many people and families living scared and insecure of what would happen to them still people were very helpful and kind towards one another and went out to meet each other. People used to meet and interact a lot. But this was not the case for floor 7 which was always gloomy, sad and lifeless.

Eventually, after some months, people ran out of food in that building. Army used to supply food for the kids but the adults started getting sick and eventually dying. On floor 8, two middle aged sisters used to live together. They had enough for themselves and were living. As the people were dying in their own homes, the sisters were also worried about themselves and their fate. They thought that their end is near and they are going to die soon. They were living locked up in their apartment. They could only hear gunshots outside and the voices of some kids who were alive because of the food being supplied to them by the army. Eventually, every adult in the building died, either because of hunger or because of sickness or because of going out and getting killed. Day after day, the sisters could still hear children. The children would also come and meet them every other day. After sometime, the sisters were not able to hear the kids anymore. They began to worry as to what must have happened. They went out of their apartment and started searching for the kids. They searched tirelessly for the kids and went to every floor except for floor 7 as it was assumed that nobody lives on floor 7. As the sisters were going down the staircase that connected floor 8 and floor 6, they could smell a foul smell and began to wonder what it was. As they set out on floor 7, they stepped on a large pool of blood and were petrified at once!

They followed the blood that led them to the apartment door of the only apartment on floor 7. The river of blood was coming from under the door of the apartment. As they slowly opened the door to a cracking sound and a dark and dingy home, they saw nobody but dead bodies of a few kids. As they went further near to the dead bodies to investigate what had happened, one of the sisters was suddenly held by her hand and taken away in the dark. The other sister ran behind her. Upon reaching there, they came across a creepy and scary woman who appeared to be the killer. As the woman was set to attack one sister, the other sister started shouting and calling someone for help. Nobody listened to her. As the woman drew her knife out to kill one sister, she was held away sharply. It turned out that 2 army officers who came to give food to children had listened to the call of help and came upstairs to help the ladies.