

EXT. GARDEN - DAY

A FLY is buzzing around a small garden, weaving between plants and pieces of outdoor furniture. Coming around the corner of a brick toolshed, FLY is suddenly trapped in a web, which stretches from the eave of the shed to a nearby tree. FLY begins to thrash, attempting to free itself from the web, but only manages to tangle itself up even further.

A SPIDER appears, crawling out from underneath the eave of the roof. Its bulbous body perches atop its 8 spindly legs, and it slowly begins to drag itself along the web.

FLY begins to struggle faster, but remains trapped by the webs.

SPIDER approaches. Its body bristles with coarse dark hairs, and the tips of its mandibles glint with a venomous sheen. Stopping a few inches away, SPIDER gazes down at FLY, its beady black eyes blinking at different rates.

SPIDER

Oh you poor thing! How silly of me to have left this old web out.
I'll have you out of there in just a moment dearie!

The SPIDER crawls up to the still struggling FLY.

SPIDER

Now hold still sweetie, we don't want you getting hurt!

FLY stops struggling, staring up at SPIDER. Using a single claw, Spider cuts through the knot of webs that is holding FLY.

SPIDER

There we go! You be careful now that you don't get stuck again, alright? Now be a good little fly and go straight home!

FLY flutters its wings, shaking loose the web fragments that are still clinging to it.

FLY

Thank you Ma'am

FLY buzzes away, leaving SPIDER alone on the web.
